

On your own or in twos or threes, imagine this circle represents all the people in your community (the area your church serves). Now, draw four circles within this big circle to represent the total number of people that your church connects with out of all those in your community. One circle for each of the first four areas:

- Harvest: the number of those finding faith, part of the discipleship of the church, and ask where is this happening?
- Green shoots: the number of those you would say are actively exploring more about faith, and ask where is this happening?
- Sowing: the number those where you are able to share something of the Christian story, and ask where is this happening?
- Ploughing the ground: the number of those where you're just building relationships at present, and ask where is this happening?
- Overgrown: the rest of the circle will represent the unreached or where you are having little impact. Ask who are these people. Why are we not reaching them?
